January 8, 2014 – Portland, OR - Launching in the summer of 2015 the new Portland Pro Am presented by Terrence Jones, will provide an opportunity for the community, players and fans to enjoy Pro Basketball with NBA talent during the off-season.

"I'm excited to start a Pro Am here in Portland," NBA Star Terrence Jones shared. "It's been many years since fans have seen a league with all levels of pro talent play in the summer time, so it's really something I think the people will enjoy. There will be chances for the community to get involved, and we also plan to give part of the proceeds to various charities. So overall I'm looking forward to starting a league that has great competition but also helps my community out at the same time."

The Portland Pro Am will feature players with various levels of professional experience ranging from some of your favorite NBA players, to successful college players who have taken their game overseas. The league will also feature college players who have completed their eligibility who are looking to make the leap to the next level. With NBA rules and high level officials managing the games from the NBA, NBA Development League and college ranks on the court, fans will be up close and personal to the fast paced Pro action right here in Portland, Oregon.

The league and Mr. Jones will sponsor several community initiatives that give resources to young athletes aspiring to make the jump to next level as well.
